

Who drives the credit-induced first-birth increase

First births are 83.4% of the total impact birth increase, shown here (83.7% within this decomposition).

Renters before the shock contribute 95.6% and nonpositive inherited net financial wealth 67.6% of the total increase (all orders, README).

2007 stationary reference — block0506, September 28 verified export. Fixed preferences, earnings, entry endowments, fiscal and housing-supply primitives; not a general-equilibrium or transition result unless labeled GE.